This period is now near at hand. It is desirable that as many persons as possible should be on the watch to observe its phases. Little has yet been ascertained respecting it, except the fact of its occurrence. are other particulars of which it is highly important that we should be informed, In order to direct observation to the most useful facts, the following facts are submitted. 1. It is not to be expected that the display will in any manner rival those of Nevember 1833, and of the same month in the year previous; which latter, though unobserved in this country, seems to have been no less remarkable than the other. It is even possible that careless observers may not detect any thing useful in the appearance of the heavens. But, of course, in the present state of our knowledge, we can predict nothing of the magnitude of the shower.

2. It cannot, nevertheless, be questioned that the shooting-stars, or metors, which will be seen, will apparently emanate from some determinate point in the celestial conparticulars at present most desirable. The stars will not in general be seen to take their ororigin from the point itself, but their directions, traced back, will pass through it in every instance. In this respect the metors will differ from the shooting-stars ordinarily seen, of which the directions seem hardiy conformabl to any fixed law; though it is possible, and perhaps probable that they may for the most part, be finally reduced to

3. The time of night at which the metoric shower attains its maximum, ought to be noted. There is reason to believe that, in places most favorably situated in regard to the diurnal rotation of the globe, this will be near sunrise. Could a multitude of observations made in places distant from the eath other, be collected and compared, we should be furnished, by the aid of our knowledge of the point of radiation, with the means of de-termining the time of the nearest apprach of the earth to the origin of the meteors.

4. It has been observed that, the Novem-ber shower is punctually periodical and of the duration. There is some doubt as to the complete similarity between it, in these respects, and that of August. The August shower is believed to be of a continuance as great as two or three days, while that of November is but of a few hours' duration. It would be well to observe as early as August 8, and to continue the observation un-til the 11th or 12th. On this account the time of greatest abundance is difficult to ascertain without many and distant observations, since, to a given observer, it may occur and pass during the day."
